

Statement of Compliance

Are you an Owner Builder?

As an Owner Builder you are responsible for all the building work that you have undertaken. If you sell the building, legal action can be taken against you for economic loss or rectification costs resulting from defective work.

Are you a Builder?

When the owner has engaged a licenced builder to carry out their building work, upon completion, the licenced building work contractor must complete and lodge a statement of compliance with the Council.

Why do I need to submit a statement of compliance?

The statement verifies that the building has been constructed in accordance with the approved plans, specifications and any attached conditions, and that your council was notified at the prescribed stages of the building work. This is the responsibility of the person who is responsible for the building work.

'Statement of Compliance' who should sign it?

The Owner is required to engage the services of a Private Certifier or Licensed Building Works Supervisor when he/she signs the 'Statement of Compliance' are verifying that the building works have been built in accordance to the approved documents. If you have engaged the services of one of these professionals to sign off on the building work then you will only need one statement of compliance as is the case when a licenced builder is engaged to do all the work.

OR

If you do not engage a Private Certifier or Licensed Building Works Supervisor you must get a signed 'Statement of Compliance', from each Licensed Building Work Contractor who performs any building work on your site. This statement is to verify that their contracted building works have been built in accordance to the approved plans i.e. 'Statement of Compliance' required from:

- Footing Contractor
- Plumber Contractor
- Electrician Contractor
- Bricklayer Contractor
- Carpenter Contractor
- Roofer Contractor
- Tiling Contractor
- Etc (any Licensed Building Work Contractor who works on your site).

This will mean that you will be required to submit multiple statements of compliance, ie from each of the above mentioned trades.
